WE NEED A HEALTHIER APPROACH

Since the last election, South West Surrey has seen the effects of divisive and regressive government policy. The health of the nation, the region and the people is dependent on politicians with little understanding of real-world problems .

Surrey NHS in crisis

We all need a doctor, but it's getting harder to see a GP here in Surrey. Meanwhile, hospital trolley waits are the highest ever. Emergency stroke services have been consolidated at Frimley, but will our stretched ambulances get patients there in time? Privatisation is up 33% in the last 2 years, and when Virgin Care lost the bid for Surrey Children's Services, they reacted by suing the NHS, diverting money from patient care. The government promised the NHS 5000 extra GPs, better staff support, more nurses, and more money. Instead, we have fewer GPs, stressful understaffing, with funding set to decrease in real terms. and 25000 unfilled nurse vacancies.

We need a publicly-owned, properly funded NHS

Surrey education cuts

All local Heads have warned that schools are having to cope with fewer qualified teachers, bigger class sizes, less support for students with special educational needs, and even more budget cuts in 2018. They may have to switch to a 4-day week.

Education cuts can and must be reversed

Surrey social care

Cuts to adult social care leave vulnerable elderly people without the care and support they need. The dwindling bus service is leaving more elderly people isolated.

Social care should be free and integrated

Surrey air quality

Air quality in Surrey towns is shockingly poor, and poor air quality kills. A new approach to traffic planning is required - not just soundbites about pedestrianisation that never seem to come to fruition.

Air quality targets must be met

DR LOUISE IRVINE

“ I've been a GP for over 25 years and care deeply about the nation's health. Our healthcare and housing, economy, and environment all affect us every day. The people of South West Surrey have an unprecedented opportunity to unseat the Health Secretary, Jeremy Hunt, and vote in someone who is dedicated to defending the NHS, and the patients who rely on it.

If elected I will be a full time MP with no party whip, devoting myself to representing the interests of my constituents and standing up for issues that you care about. ”

Cooperation in local politics

Louise is backed by Compass: a progressive alliance of NHA, Green, Labour and Lib Dem supporters working together for a good society.

"Dr Louise Irvine has exceptional integrity, insight and experience in caring for people and the world we live in. She has my vote."

- Penny Rivers, Liberal Democrat Surrey County Councillor
